

Jason Mazeski

Dr. Jason Mazeski is in his 17th year with the NYPD. He has over a decade's worth of experience in training and program design.

Jason was the lead curriculum designer and instructor for the NYPD's Counterterrorism Division, creating both instructor-led and scenario-based training in subjects such as active shooter response, behavioral observation, threat and risk mitigation, and terrorism awareness.

He has taught over 10,000 police personnel throughout his training tenure. He is currently assigned to the Office of Professional Development, where he specializes in leadership, learning, and communication.

Dr. Mazeski has acted as the instructional development expert in his assignments, offering other trainers instructional development workshops, curriculum design seminars, and public speaking coaching. In his spare time, he is a professor of public speaking at CityTech College. Dr. Mazeski was a keynote speaker at the World Police Summit in 2024 and has spoken at several conferences such as ILEETA, NAFTA, ACJS, and AAACE. He holds a Masters in Adult Education & Curriculum Design from Buffalo State University and an Ed.D. in Adult Education & Leadership from Teachers College, Columbia University.