

Biography for Martin Dadio

Martin Dadio is a highly experienced law enforcement professional with a distinguished 23-year career with the New Haven Connecticut Police Department, culminating in roles as Patrol Officer, Detective, and Sergeant. His expertise spans a wide range of law enforcement functions, including patrol duties, major crimes investigations (homicides, shootings, assaults, rapes), narcotics enforcement, and supervision of both detectives and patrol officers. As a Detective, he conducted complex investigations, secured crime scenes, interviewed witnesses, interrogated suspects, obtained warrants, and provided expert testimony in federal, state, and local courts. He also served as a Lead Investigator in high-profile cases and supervised a special investigation unit focused on sexual assaults and domestic violence. In narcotics enforcement, he conducted undercover operations, collaborated with federal and state agencies, and executed search and arrest warrants. As a Sergeant, he supervised patrol officers, implemented community-based policing strategies, and focused on reducing gang violence and narcotics activity. Currently, Martin Dadio serves as Project Coordinator for a de-escalation training program, delivering critical training to police departments throughout the Eastern region. This training equips officers with the skills to identify and effectively interact with diverse individuals, reducing the likelihood of use-of-force incidents. Martin is passionate about promoting best practices in law enforcement and fostering stronger community-police relationships.
